San Marco Unveils Zoncolan

By Kate Starkebaum
Selle San Marco's new Zoncolan is named after the most extreme climb in the Giro D'Italia. The Zoncolan, weighing in at only 198 grams, is designed for the road bike enthusiast looking for a modern classic. The Zoncolan is a leather-covered saddle in black or white and is available in three sizes.

The Zoncolan (S.I.Z.E. 235) features titanium rails and is ideal for road use. The Zoncolan Triathgel (S.I.Z.E. 235) contains 4-8mm of extra padding in the tip and is designed especially for triathletes.

The Zoncolan Arrowhead Gelaround (S.I.Z.E. 245) allows riders to experience the patented arrow-shaped groove which significantly reduces the pressure in the perineal area. The gel, which surrounds the cutout, further enhances rider comfort.

The Zoncolan Power (S.I.Z.E. 255) features chromo rails and contains extra padding in nose and base of the saddle designed to maintain comfort during longer rides.

Team Tibco launches new rider to podium all season

Selle San Marco-sponsored Team Tibco burst into the spotlight in 2007 with coverage in Cycling News, VeloNews, Pedal Magazine and a host of other media sights with an impressive winning streak.

Led by team captain Brooke Miller, riding Glamour Aspide, the team found podium spots in all the major early season races. With the support of her team propelling her into the limelight, Miller caught the eye of the National Team and represented the USA in Europe. In her second racing season ever, Miller's tremendous success brought home a sprint jersey in Holland and two top ten finishes against the top competition in the world.
